THE TRIBAL EXCHANGE

Fall 2010

Now open to American Indian students grades 4-12!

We are pleased to announce that the Tribal Exchange, a Native American Stock Market Game competition, will be FREE for Native students nationwide this fall! The Tribal Exchange project was initiated by the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) to help promote financial literacy for Native American youth. By learning economic, math and financial literacy skills, students who participate in the Tribal Exchange will be better prepared to lead their communities and Indian Country toward a bright and prosperous future.

The Tribal Exchange will run for 10 weeks (Sept 27-Dec 3) and is open to American Indian students in grades 4 through 12. Teams may be formed in classes or in school clubs and programs. Each team is given a hypothetical $100,000 to invest. The team that increases the value of the investment the most during the game wins, but all participants learn valuable financial and team-building life skills. The project is facilitated by using The Stock Market Game™ program.

Prizes

1st Place: iPod Nano and a trip to Washington D.C. to attend NCAI Executive Council Winter Session and meet your congressman!

2nd and 3rd Place: iPod Shuffle

This is an incredible opportunity for students and teachers to participate at no cost. Teachers should register as early as possible to review the teaching materials available online and to begin training for the program.

Teachers and other adults may act as advisors to the students either in the classroom or after school. No prior experience in the stock market is necessary. Webinar trainings will be offered to prepare advisors. Additionally, support is available via the Help Desk link or by emailing the SMG Coordinator directly.
