Lakers star Luka Dončić missed the team's last four games with a hamstring injury, but he will play on Sunday in the All-Star Game.

"I feel pretty good. You know, I've been working to get back," Dončić said on Saturday. "Obviously, I wanted to play the last [Lakers] game, but it wasn't possible. I was almost there, so I think I'll play a little bit."

Dončić was the leading vote getter in the Western Conference and will start for the World Team. Expect coach Darko Rajaković (of the Toronto Raptors) to keep his minutes down. Even if this game is competitive, it's not the stress load of a normal NBA game, so it's a good way for Dončić to ease back in.

USA vs. World format

The format for the USA vs. the World is necessarily unique.

Three teams of eight (or nine for the World) will compete in a round-robin format, culminating in a championship game. Those teams are:

USA Stars: Scottie Barnes, Devin Booker, Cade Cunningham, Jalen Duren, Anthony Edwards, Chet Holmgren, Jalen Johnson, Tyrese Maxey

USA Stripes: Jaylen Brown, Jalen Brunson, Kevin Durant, Brandon Ingram, LeBron James, Kawhi Leonard, Donovan Mitchell, De'Aaron Fox

World Team: Deni Avdija, Luka Dončić, Nikola Jokić, Jamal Murray, Alperen Şengün, Pascal Siakam, Karl-Anthony Towns, Victor Wembanyama, Norman Powell

Anthony Edwards, Devin Booker and Cade Cunningham headline Team USA Stars while Jalen Brunson, Kevin

Durant and LeBron James are featured on USA Stripes. Luka Dončić, Nikola Jokić and Victor Wembanyama are set to suit up for Team World.

The NBA All-Star Saturday events had a new look yesterday, with NBC carrying the festivities for the first time since 2002. The NBA also brought back the Shooting Stars challenge in lieu of the Skills Challenge.

But structural issues remained — The 3-Point Contest, which went first, was the highlight of the entire program as an NBA superstar coming off injury made his return in dramatic fashion. The Shooting Stars challenge and Dunk Contest were lackluster by comparison.

Let's recap, starting with the story of the day in the 3-Point Contest...
